Count de la Bedoyere First Gorman Lecturer

On Tuesday, October 10th, at 3:00 p.m. Count Michael de la Bedoyere will deliver the first of the Gorman Lectures for the current year in Xavier Lounge. His topic will be: "The Church and War in the Nuclear Age."

French and Jesuit

Count de la Bedoyere, descended from an old French family, was educated at Stonyhurst by the Jesuits and at Oxford University. On his mother's side he is a grandson of Doctor Thorold, Bishop of Winchester. After completing his studies at Oxford, he taught at Beaumont College, conducted by the English Jesuits, and at the University of Minnesota.

Catholic Weeklys

Aspiring to journalism, he became the assistant editor of the "Dublin Review," the most important English Catholic quarterly, and, in 1936, the editor-founder of the "Catholic Herald," an old paper taken over by a group of Catholic converts and reissued as a modern type Catholic weekly with special interest in politics, social, and cultural affairs against the Catholic background. Since that date he has retained this position and vastly increased the circulation of this weekly.

Twenty Books

Beginning in 1931 with "The Drift of Democracy," he has written nearly twenty books, sociological, historical, biographical, and theological. His books include "The Meddlesome Friar and the Wayward Pope," "The Layman in the Church," "Christianity in the Market Place, Christian Crisis," and "The Life of Baron von Hugel." At present he is engaged on the preparation of a new "Life of St. Francis of Assisi." The lecture is open to the public.

Ordonez Discusses Cuba At First I. R. C. Meeting

Dick Moore, the Secretary General of the International Relations Club, has announced that George Ordonez, a junior political science major, will lecture on Cuba at a meeting of the I.R.C. on Tuesday, October 10 in the Student Lounge.

The Panamanian student will discuss his trip to Panama, Costa Rica, and Cuba during the past summer and will explain the relationship between the U.S. and Panama over the controversial problem of the Panama Canal. The Latin American believes that the misunderstanding between the two is due to "the lack of information on both sides."

Cuban Perals

George will also "air his views" on the sociological and political aspects of the Pearl of the Antillies, Cuba, where he spent six days collecting facts about the social and political reforms of the turbulent island.

Costa Rica

In contrast with this we will explain the organized political and social stability of the "Switzerland of the Americas," Costa Rica.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 and all are invited to attend.

George Ordonez

Rugby Game

Congratulations to the Frosh on their defeat of the Sophs, Friday in the Rugby Game.

Freshman Welcome Dance

The Freshman Welcome Dance will be held on Saturday, October 14th, in the gym. Music for the occasion will be provided by the "Swingtones." Tickets for the dance can be obtained through the Soph officers, Ed Slawski, Pete Genovese, and Dick Moore.

Council Hearing Airs Opinions

By Dave Schroeder

The newly-found Academic Committee of the Student Council will hold an open hearing on Wednesday, October 10 at 1 o'clock in the Student Lounge. The purpose of the meeting is to present suggestions for the academic betterment of the school.

Judgment Passed

On the basis of what is said Wednesday the committee plans to prepare a student questionnaire to sound out the school as a whole on the ideas presented. A report will then be submitted to the council at large.

Anyone with an idea regarding improvement of specific courses, additional courses that should not be required, etc., is welcome to present his suggestion and discuss it with his fellow students.

The committee was set up by the council at their September 14 meeting under the inspiration of Father Beatty's and Father Quain's addresses to study practical ways of raising Loyola's intellectual standards.

Cosgrove Chairman

The committee consists of Chairmen Tom Cosgrove, a junior physics major; John Feller, a senior history major; and sophomores Richard Lawrence and Jerry Dotterweich.

President John Baynes announced that in the future all new business should be presented to a member of the executive committee before their meeting to decide the agenda. The proposed motions to the council members and the students well before the council meeting so that increased effectiveness and decreased waste of time can be achieved.

Editorial

Waste of Time ?

Next week the Gorman Lecture Series will initiate its 1961-62 presentations with a lecture by Count Michael de la Bedoyere entitled "The Church and War in the Nuclear Age" (see article, page 1, col. 1). From experience of last year's lectures, few students can be expected to attend. We feel that such inattendance of students is a serious oversight on the part of many; for the quality of these and other lecture series on campus is usually of such degree, that the audience is sure to benefit, if not intellectually, at least emotionally.

Allow us to mention some of the speakers and their topics of the past two years; in order to illuminate the calibre and diversity of the campus lectures: The Gorman lectures of last year included "T.S. Eliot's 'The Elder Statesman'" by Sister Mary Cleophas, "Theme in the Modern Novel" by Phillip Scharper, "Twentieth Century Literature and the Image of Man" by Fr. William T. Noon, "The Problem of Radiation Hazards" by Dr. Russel H. Morgan. The John Gilmary Shea History Academy presented Dr. Jules Davids discussing "American Diplomacy Since World War II: A Cold War Balance Sheet." The Sadie Baker Aydt Lecture series sponsored "The Higher Realism of Woodrow Wilson" by Arthur S. Link.

It is amazing that the Smyth-Baynes debate last year drew a much larger crowd than the lecture by Dr. Leo Bartemeier on mental health. During times like those that we are presently undergoing, we wonder if it wouldn't be wise for every person in this school to dedicate himself to the pursuit of knowledge in many and varying fields and to broaden his viewpoint on the world at the expense of his leisure time? We welcome your thoughts on this matter.

Letters To The Editor

To the editor:

Would you please require G. Paul Montgomery to collect some facts before he composes his column. His past two contributions have been so full of inaccuracies that they have seriously detracted from the reputation of the Greyhound.

Thank you,
Joseph P. McCurdy '62

Dear Sir:

I think the idea of buying another Greyhound dog is ridiculous and certainly a waste. The school has no need for such a thing. Personally, I always enjoyed the antics of the dog at functions; whoever it was, was very enjoyable.

Yours,
Barrad Trux

A Military Salute Lt. Colonel Dunn

"Come September" has its implications; but to the student is a time of change. Change in the sense of a return from that dormant state induced by the season of Summer to the activity of intellectual endeavors. Also, it is the time of new faces on the campus. The freshmen are quite obvious to anyone except other freshmen, but the new faces among the faculty are not quite so, and thus it is the aim of the Greyhound to familiarize the students with the "freshmen" among the faculty. It is my privilege then to introduce Lt. Colonel Joseph F. Dunn, the newest professor of military science and tactics.

Stars and Bars

Col. Dunn comes to Evergreen from Viet Nam where he was Senior U.S. Army Advisor to the Command and General Staff College of the Vietnamese Armed Forces. Prior to this he was a faculty member of the U.S. Command and General Staff College from 1957 to 1960. It is here that means, management, and tactics of command of an army at divisional level are taught to captains, majors, and Lt. colonels of the U.S. Armed Forces.

During World War II, Col. Dunn served with the First Army artillery which fought in the European Theater. His unit participated in the Battle of the Bulge, and the crossing of the Rhine. It was during this Central European campaign that Col. Dunn was cited for three Battle Stars and the Bronze Star. Following the War he was made a member of the General Staff, European Theater Headquarters from 1945 to 1947. In 1953 he was appointed to the General Staff, U.S. Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va. where he stayed until 1957.

Our New Leader

A graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, Col. Dunn received his commission through the university's R.O.T.C. program and later received an M.A. degree from the University of Minnesota. He is a graduate also of the Artillery School and the Command and General Staff College.

In his present assignment, Col. Dunn succeeds Lt. Col. Misha N. Kadick, who is currently attending the National War College at Fort McNair in Washington, D.C.

Lt. Col. Joseph F. Dunn

The Watchdog

We'd like to start off this column by printing a letter which we've received from one of your benefactors. To wit:

Dear Watchdog:

It is with great anxiety, as well as a pen and paper, that I am writing you this letter to ask your help in defeating the Student Council's plan of beginning a Drink Education Course at your college. I think that it is an outrage that men of your background should try to influence the health of young men by teaching them to drink. Thanks for your help!

Yours,
Andy

Our thanks to the bird (the feathered vertebrate, not the word man) who has been messing on the rear window of our car lately. We made this discovery after thinking for two weeks that we were being followed by some guy in a greenish-brown Volkswagen.

Charlie O'Donnell thinks that since we now have more lamp-posts than trees on the campus, the college name should be changed from Evergreen to "Ever-Ready."

Nasty rumors are beginning to build about our sanity, after some of the remarks that we have made in the recent weeks. However, we are as sane as ever and are even willing to meet with any doubting student down at the Greyhound office. Directions: Just turn left at the Game Room and follow the saliva.

Speaking of the Game Room, word comes to us that the inhabitants are waiting the arrival of new equipment with baited breath. And here, for all of these years, we've been calling it halitosis.

Confidential to the Sophomores:

Why must you guys continually harass the people who are trying to do you the most good? After all, you can't really think that you're doing yourselves any good by continually planning riots against Nelka, can you? Get smart: Save him for the Russians. Tovarich?

The annual Rugby Game was held last week, and it was noted that everyone there had a great time. We saw one Freshman there who was so happy that he was smiling from ear to ear. Later, we learned that someone had cut his throat.

One of the most crucial tests for a Broadway show is its pre-Broadway tour. During this not-always happy journey all the remaining rough edges must be polished off before the fierce New York critics get a crack at it with their vitrolitic pens. It was not so very long ago that Baltimore was considered a must on this tour for perspective shows. A success here was an almost sure hit on the Great White Way. However, these days have long since departed. New Haven and other such towns now furnish the abrasive which is so necessary for a top-notch performance. Every now and then, the Baltimore audience gets an opportunity to view these possible successes. Last week there was one at Ford's.

John Patrick's latest play is a comedy entitled "Everybody Loves Opal." Opal Kronkie is by nature and tradition a collector of junk. In her searches she befriends everything and everyone she finds.

The play is a comedy in the more traditional and literary sense of the word, since the reviewer was seldom prompted to fits of hilarity. Several lines in the play are quite funny, but actors seldom pull out all the stops for a matinee. Eileen Heckart created a very lovable character and her performance often carries the show through some of the slower moments of the show, which I am pleased to say are not too many. Stubby Kaye, the marry'in Sam of Lil' Abner, plays Solomon with a deft and ease that is always delightful to watch. Gloria is played a little unconvincingly by Brenda Vaccaro. Brenda tried her best to put her all into the play, but sometimes she just seemed to be as tired of the performance as Gloria was of life. Opposite her, was Donald Herron as Bradford. Trying his best to be cynical, sophisticated and disgusted, Donald obviously thought some of his lines were funnier than the audience did, and consequently often paused for a laugh that never materialized. Much of the poor timing can of course be explained by the matinee audience, which at times seemed to be even dumber than the proverbial stupid beast which all thespians are forced to appease. In relatively minor parts were John Napier and James Coco, who wandered on and off the stage at appropriate times. Of the two, the prize for the most uninterested must go to the Officer, John Napier. James Coco appeared interested.

The play, when it appears on Broadway, will show much more perfection and the cast will undoubtedly manifest increased interest and effort. Eileen Heckart gives by far the best performance. Stubby Kaye also deserves laud for his endeavors. Although the play was not the funniest ever seen, it was quite pleasant and enjoyable. If the Big City does not mind a little implausible homespun, quite a few, if not everybody, will love Opal.

STICKS AND STONES

The traditional policy of exempting those students with an A or B R.O.T.C. grade from the semester examinations in military science has been cancelled. Allow me to comment on this policy change.

The least those persons responsible for the measure could have done was to inform the students of the new ruling. Some students will be hearing the news for the first time when they read this column. This writer heard it only because he had the good fortune to be in a class where the question of exemptions was posed. The change will be of great importance to most students, and they would, I think, like to be informed of it before semester exam time rolls around.

Moreover, the compelling of A and B students to take semester exams serves no useful purpose. Semester exams serve primarily as a crutch, as a device for helping to pull up low or failing grades. Those students whose grades fall into this category were required to take the exams anyway. As far as the A or B students are concerned, all realize the fact that ROTC courses for the most part are such that any student capable of memorizing pages of detail will merit a good grade (A or B). (This may not be the intended situation, but nevertheless it is the true one). Therefore, they can treat the final ROTC exams in one of two ways. They can regard them as just one more memorizing job in an unimportant subject, as do most of them (and I hope that I am not shocking any of the MS Dept. by saying that most students regard ROTC as an unimportant subject and a general waste of time). In this case they memorize the necessary material, get their A or B for the course by doing well on the exam, and then promptly forget what they have learned. These students derive no benefit from these exams.

Or the A and B student may fall into that small category who are genuinely interested in ROTC, who perhaps want to enter the advanced course or to make a career of the army. In this case, they will have been learning, not merely memorizing during the semester. They will already know the material, and the exam will yield no benefits for them.

As a final consideration, I feel that compelling an A or B student to take the exams will hurt them. ROTC exams coincide with another exam in another subject. The student thus has to devote a good portion of his study to time to ROTC, time which he could be spending in his major field. This could hurt him considerably.

Therefore, since ROTC semester exams do not benefit the A or B student, and since they could hurt him, I would request the return to the old policy of exam exemption.

GREYHOUND SPORTS

By Tom Kenney

If you will glance at column two of today's Greyhound sports page, you will see an article entitled, "Meet the Coach." The Greyhound sports staff hopes to continue this feature on a regular basis so that all of the members of the Hound coaching department may be properly introduced to the student body.

Loyola athletes are blessed with sincere and hardworking coaches. Unlike their counterparts at the so-called "big name" athletic schools, most of them hold down outside jobs besides coaching. Yet they give generously of their time and effort. The motive for their labors must be the personal satisfaction which comes from helping their charges along because they receive very little recognition or praise.

A coach's lot is not an easy one. He worries; he is the one to tell a boy that he is cut from the squad; he feels the wrath of the armchair quarterbacks who don't even know what's going on. Sometimes, although it rarely happens at Loyola, a coach is not even appreciated by the boys he is trying to help. To them he is just somebody who is always making them do what they don't want to do.

However there is a bright side to the profession which more than atones for the trials of coaching. The one boy who listens and learns and goes on to bigger and better things; the respect and appreciation shown by players and fans alike; the feeling of satisfaction with a job well done; these are the coach's well deserved rewards.

Dick Clem

Hound Wrestlers Need New Coach

The Hound wrestling team is looking for a coach. Last year's popular mentor, Dick Clem, has taken a teaching position at Southern High where he will also be J.V. mat coach.

Many Returnees

Almost all of the members of last season's Hound mat squad, which posted a fine 5-2 record, will return this year, giving rise to hopes for a very successful campaign. Nine matches have been scheduled, beginning with Hopkins on Jan. 6th. Practice will probably start as soon as the new coach is appointed by Athletic Director Lefty Reitz.

Intramural Action Under Way In Three Sports

The Intramural Touch Football League officially got under way on Wednesday, October 4th. On Wednesday afternoon the Sharks played the Square Roots of Three, and the Hawks went against the Vikings. There will not be any games today due to the First Friday observance. The first round will get under way again on October 11th with the Thumpers meeting the Debits and the Hot Shots playing the Mafia. On the thirteenth of October the games will pit the Junior Science Majors against the Comics and the Dukes against the winner of the Sharks--Square Roots of Three contest.

Bill McElroy

Meet The Coach

Bill McElroy or "Mac," as he is known to most students, is not only the manager of the Campus Shop but also the Hound's crosscountry and track coach. Recognizable by his spirit, quick wit and big cigars, "Mac" has been a popular personality around the Loyola campus since coming to the school in 1946.

Former Star Athlete

His own athletic career began at Mt. St. Joe in Baltimore where he earned a total of 12 letters in the sports of crosscountry, soccer and track. Twice he was chosen for the All-Maryland soccer team and one year was the M.S.A. mile champion.

Organized Bowl Game

Upon graduation from St. Joe, "Mac" went to work for the Bethlehem Steel Corp. and also served as a sportswriter for the Community Press of Dundalk. While with the Dundalk paper, he organized the annual Steel Bowl football game.

Promotional Leader

"Mac" has always shown a deep interest in the sports and especially in the youngsters that play them. In fact, he still finds time to act as a promotional leader for the Baltimore Bureau of Recreation. The Greyhound sports staff is proud to salute coach McElroy.

The final day of the first round has the Hamilton Rek playing the Bloodclots and the Foul Bagles opposing the 1.5's. There are now fifteen teams in the football league. The Dukes are picked by the experts as the team to beat.

Tennis and Bowling

The Tennis Intramurals have gotten under way, but new entries are still being accepted. In early action Keating defeated Smith 6-2, 6-3, and McCanna took Keating 6-3, 6-1. Matches take place during the Wednesday and Friday breaks.

Bowling got under way yesterday afternoon at the Guilford Lanes and will continue for the next few months. Individual and team entries are also still being accepted for the bowling league. Last season the bowling league was one of the most popular of the intramural activities. Nappy Doherty forsees even greater success for the duckpin artists this year.

Block "L" Meets

Last Friday, in the gym recreation room, the Block "L" Club held its first meeting of the year. Club president Charley Graham, who was elected last spring, presided over the election of the other officers who were chosen by the members as follows; Tony Rivezzo, vice pres.; Don Wallenhorst, sec.; and George Yurek, treas. The club members also voted to adopt a heavier-knit Block "L" award sweater than the one in use at the present time. Also enacted was a motion to hold the popular annual Block "L" Dance on Saturday night, May 12th. Charley Graham was chosen to head the dance committee. Athletic Director Lefty Reitz addressed the gathering urging support of the Invitational Basketball Tournament which will be sponsored by the College in December. The meeting was extremely well attended and run in orderly fashion by the officers.

Tom Kenney, Hank McGraw warm up for meet with Towson teachers. Hound harriers won 25-31 while the booters lost 1-0.

Booters To Play Southern Teams

The Soccer team left last night for a trip southward to Virginia. This afternoon the Hounds will meet the Roanoke College booters on their field at 2 p.m. After spending the night in Roanoke, the team will engage Lynchburg College tomorrow at Lynchburg. Next Wednesday the soccer team will be on the road again, this time meeting their arch-rivals, the Mountaineers of Mount St. Mary's at 2:25 p.m. on their field.

Starting Team Set

Coach Lefty Reitz has announced the starting lineup for these games. Mike Elliot will be guarding the nets. The defensive line will consist of Jim Kennedy, Charlie Graham, and Sam Amato. The full-back positions will be held down by the Campbell duo, John and Rick. The offensive line will be: center forward--Dennis Grabowski, outside left--John Kircher, inside left--Jack Palmer, and on the right side Carl Manfre will be outside and Joe Kosiorek on the inside. Among the reserves, most likely to see action are Paul Cashour, Alex Schlipp, and Harry Bregel.

Harriers To Visit South

Yesterday afternoon Cross-country Coach Bill McElroy and his harriers left Loyola, in company with the soccer team, to begin a two day invasion of Virginia.

This afternoon the Greyhounds will go against the Maroons of Roanoke in a dual meet. Following the meet, the team will spend the night at Roanoke, and will move on to Lynchburg on Saturday for another dual meet.

This trip is something new on the crosscountry schedule. It has been a number of years since a squad of Loyola runners last made a trek into the Virginia hinterlands.

Meet Archrivals Oct. 11

Next Wednesday, Oct. 11, the harriers will again venture into enemy territory, when they travel to Emmitsburg, the home of their powerful arch-rival, Mt. St. Mary's. Last year in a home meet, the Hounds edged the Mounties, 27-28. This year the Mountaineers look very tough and are the pre-season choice to capture the Conference title. The Hounds, however, will be gunning for an upset.
